Fedora 7 by Axolight

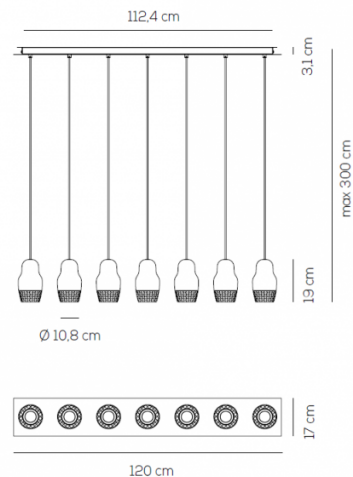

Dima Loginoff is inspired by Russian culture and heritage, something that becomes obvious with one of Axolight's classics, the Fedora. Its name comes from an old Russian name, the Russian version of the name Theodora meaning gift from God. With a discreet and minimalist shape, the Fedora is a reference to the traditional Russian doll, the matryoska.

Fedora 7 is comprised of seven lights arranged in a line, hanging at the same height and from a rectangular, white varnished canopy. This is the only Fedora light with a linear arrangement. As with all Fedora lights, the Fedora 7 is available in three metallic colours: chrome, rose gold or bronze. The diffuser of all Fedora lights is part aluminium and part transparent glass. Axolight advises that the Fedora lights should only be used with LED lamps. A light suitable for both residential and commercial use, the Fedora 7 will look perfect above a meeting room, a buffet, dining table is the perfect lighting solution for any occasion.

Loginoff created the Fedora Collection which includes various suspensions with 1, 3, 6 or 12 lights; hanging at different heights and from a round ceiling canopy. It also includes a recessed built-in light, with a transparent glass diffuser.
