Artek A910 Wall light

Designed by Alvar Aalto during the 1950s, the Artek A910 wall light is an exquisite combination of functional lighting and sculptural form. The hand-riveted shade is composed of delicate metal sheets that are arranged in staggered circles, allowing the light to diffuse softly and create a warm, inviting glow. This timeless design offers versatility, as it can be installed as an uplight or downlight, providing flexibility for various interior settings. The A910 is ideal for use in private homes, offices, or public buildings, where it can enhance both the ambience and functionality of the space.

The A910 wall light embodies Aalto's mastery of materials and his dedication to creating lighting solutions that blend seamlessly into their environments. Its minimalist form ensures it can be paired with a wide variety of design styles, from contemporary to classic. The sculptural quality of the light's construction adds a subtle decorative element, making it more than just a functional fixture but also an integral part of the room's aesthetic. Its refined design and soft lighting effect continue to make the A910 a popular choice for those seeking both beauty and utility in their interiors.
